Property Description

This new property is in the Escaleras neighborhood, which is one of the most popular places to buy a home in Costa Rica. Due to the area's cool mountain setting and close proximity to the beach, Escaleras is definitely the place to be. There is nowhere else quite like this in Costa Rica, which is why real estate in this specific part of the country has become such a hot commodity. This newly constructed, single-level residence features an open floor plan with design elements that tactfully open the home up to gorgeous outdoor spaces. The vaulted ceilings and large sliding glass doors in the main living area create a smooth transition between two different worlds. The views from the western side of the home are dominated by blue hues with a tropical pool overlooking the Pacific Ocean. To the east, the setting completely transforms into an emerald green rainforest setting with old-growth trees and a natural freshwater creek flowing in the backyard.
