Property Description

Situated on the Central Pacific coast of Costa Rica, just one hour from the international airport and the western suburbs of Escazu and Santa Ana, Nativa is a resort property combining convenience, luxury, privacy, seclusion with stunning ocean, mountain and coastal views. Anyone who has visited the Central Pacific coast in Costa Rica, has come across the entrance to this majestic resort property, whose elegant entrance defines the luxury inside the gates, while its lush landscape hides the true jewel of this one of a kind property. It shares significant biological exchange with the neighboring park, Carara, from the exotic conversations of epiphytes deep in the forest, to the mammalian murmur of pumas and ocelots. Within its boundaries it is common to see flocks of macaws crossing to the lower sections of the mangrove or weighing down the branches of a kapok tree on a hill. Envisioned as very low-density development and divided into three stages, the main feature of Nativa is providing communion with Nature without sacrificing comfort for those who accept the luxury of being "disconnected."
